

Jim Tuerk
CEO

14 AUGUST 2020

The next Aero evolution

Over the past decade, Aero Industries leveraged its foundation of product innovation into rapid growth. During the pause in the trailer industry, the leadership team at Aero is analyzing all aspects of the company to assess gains, challenges and opportunities.

As a first step and in response to market conditions, customer desires and need for greater efficiency, the operations and sales management teams have been reorganized. CEO Jim Tuerk stated “we have good people, with good hearts, talent, passion and ability to grow.” He continued by saying that the restructuring based on product lines will allow for “deeper product and market understanding with the goal of greatly improving customer service.”

Aero’s newly restructured lead sales and marketing management team includes: Sales and Marketing VP and Flatbed Product Manager Jeff Boyd, Dump Product Manager Jerry Ace and Refuse Product Manager Ron Eggers.

Operations have been reorganized under newly promoted VP Operations Art Thomas, who will be assisted by Operations Managers Ivan Gelic (Indianapolis, IN), Kim Shaw (Kent, OH) and Steve White (Omaha, NE).

Aero Industries, Inc., is one of the nation’s leading providers of innovative accessories for the transportation industry. Family owned and operated for over 75 years, their American made products include a wide range of innovative tarp systems and accessories for dump and flatbed trailers. Headquartered in Indianapolis, Indiana, they serve customers and dealers throughout North America from locations in Omaha and Valley, Nebraska and Kent, Ohio.

For more information, please visit: aeroindustries.com

Art Thomas
VP Operations

Jeff Boyd
VP Sales and Marketing and
Flatbed Product Manager

Jerry Ace
Dump Product Manager

Ron Eggers
Refuse Product Manager